A monument is on its way to Appalachian State University.

According to the athletic department's Troy Heustess, the monument comes in the form of a boulder.

"This has been planned for a pretty good while. You know, the nickname of the stadium is 'the rock,'" Heustess said.

The local rock is being loaded in Foscoe, and traffic may be delayed on Rivers Street as it makes its commute to Kidd Brewer Stadium- Just in time for Saturday's home season opener against Lenoir Rhyne.

The rock is expected to arrive around 6 p.m. this evening.
