

ASU Takes in 1315 Units of Blood

Written by Steve Frank

Thursday, 27 September 2012 06:08

Appalachian etched its name a little deeper in history yesterday with over 1200 donors turning out to give blood resulting in the collection of 1315 units of blood. ASU officials say the goal was achieved with minimal wait times for donors. So Appalachian donors and volunteers are celebrating another series of back-to-back-to back success, recording another setting blood drive for a college campus.