

Domestic violence victims protected

Written by Lauren Ohnesorge
Tuesday, 12 June 2007 19:27

A bill that would make it easier for a domestic violence victim to change her name coasted unopposed through the House.

The bill would ensure more information is provided to applicants of protective orders-information about legal aid, victims' compensation and other services. The bill's next stop is the Senate for a concurrence motion.