

Library more than doubles in size, director says

Written by Lauren Ohnesorge
Friday, 15 June 2007 18:04

Johnson County Library director Linda Icenhour is excited. Saturday from 1 to 4 is the Grand Opening of the newly remodeled library. While construction took almost a year to complete, it will all be worth it, she says.

The library features a new children's nook and a genealogy room.

That's not all. The renovations have more than doubled the space, adding over 3,000 square feet, Icenhour said. Additional shelving comes with the package.

The county and city along with several grants funded the project. The library is located on North Church Street in Mountain City, Tennessee.