

Renewable energy bill clears first Senate vote

Written by Lauren Ohnesorge
Thursday, 28 June 2007 16:09

A measure that would require utility companies in North Carolina to provide 12.5 percent of their retail electricity from renewable energy and power-saving measures cleared its first Senate vote.

The bill was approved 46-1, but faces a final vote in the Senate before it goes to the state House.