According to general manager Chris Robbins, there's an easy reason people should come out to Tweetsie Railroad for their Independence Day celebrations.

It will have the biggest and best fireworks display, he says.

In fact, Robbins claims hundreds of fireworks will light up the sky.

The park itself will be open until nine. At eight o'clock, a country band is scheduled to appear. The real story, however, is at 9:30, after the park closes. Guests will be ushered out to the parking lot to experience the fireworks. If you're just coming for the show- Robbins says to come early.

The parking lot is usually full by around eight.

He recommends coming really early, and spending the day at Tweetsie Railroad.
