

Study finds terrible traffic in North Carolina

Written by Lauren Ohnesorge
Thursday, 28 June 2007 16:10

A study released yesterday found that, not only have traffic congestion and highway fatalities increased, but North Carolina is among the worst states for traffic.

North Carolina shared the infamy with California, Minnesota and New Jersey. They were not the only ones cast in a negative light by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte study. Montana's highways were judged the deadliest and forty-two percent of West Virginia's roads were judged too narrow.