

Panthers Give Dexter Jackson a Look

Written by Adam Hicks

Wednesday, 09 September 2009 07:06

The Carolina Panthers brought in former App State wideout (and Sports Illustrated cover boy), Dexter Jackson, for a workout yesterday.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers cut Jackson last week after he was selected by the Bucs in the second round of the 2008 draft.

Adam Caplan of ScoutNFLNetwork.com reports the Panthers may be interested in Jackson because they lack depth in their wide receivers' corps. Caplan also added that he wouldn't be surprised if the Panthers signed Jackson.

(Photo courtesy of Appalachian State University)