Sophomore quarterback Terrell Robinson has quit the team, according to Chattanooga coach Russ Huesman, who made the announcement following practice on Tuesday. Robinson was the co-freshman of the year last season. Robinson split playing time with redshirt freshman Jacob Huesman, the coach's son, in a season-opening loss at South Florida last Saturday. Robinson, who filled in so well when B.J. Coleman (now on the Green Bay Packers practice squad) was hurt last year, got the start against the Bulls, but he struggled.

Robinson passed for only 20 yards while getting sacked three times. Huesman was marginally better completing nine of 13 passes for 82 yards, but also was sacked three times.

Discipline problems were not an issue, according to coach Russ Huesman and the fourth-year coach referred all questions about the situation to Robinson, who has not responded to the media. ASU travels to Chattanooga on September 22.
