

Center Kalil Out For Season

Written by Max Henson

Thursday, 11 October 2012 08:45

Ryan Kalil's left foot injury is much worse than originally expected, and the Panthers center has been placed on injured reserve. Doctors determined he suffered a Lisfranc injury against the Seahawks.

"He went and saw Dr. (Robert) Anderson yesterday, and there was a lot of concern," head coach Ron Rivera said. "Today, everything was confirmed.

"He is going to be lost for the season... It's unfortunate. He was having a terrific year."

The injury occurred sometime late in the first half, but Kalil – a three-time Pro Bowler – finished the game.

"I think (the injury happened) just before the half," Rivera said. "He got some treatment, they re-taped his foot and brought him back out there and he finished the game. The assumption we were (going) with was that he was going to be fine."

The surgery is expected to be done "sometime next week."

Rivera said the long-term prognosis for Kalil after he completes his rehab "should be very good," but that hasn't made the devastating news any easier to take.

"He's struggling with it," Rivera said. "He wants to be out there with his guys and fighting for us. It's a tough pill for him to swallow right now, but he'll bounce back."

Geoff Hangartner, the Panthers' starter at right guard, will likely replace Kalil at center.

"Hangartner is our initial (replacement)," Rivera said. "We'll work him there. Jeff Byers will work there as well and we'll also work him at guard. We'll continue to work Garry Williams at guard and tackle and we'll see how things unfold.

"We'll also look (at the free agent market). We talked last night about what we would do, and now that plan goes into motion."

It's near-impossible to replace a three-time Pro Bowl center midseason, but the Panthers are fortunate to have an experienced backup and are very fortunate that he's healthy. Hangartner had started 20 consecutive games at right guard for the Panthers before missing last Sunday's game against Seattle with a knee injury, but he is recovering nicely.

To boot, 47 of his 55 starts before he returned to the Panthers last season had been at center.

"I'm feeling good, feeling a lot better," Hangartner said Wednesday. "I've come a long way in the last week-and-a-half. I fully anticipate being back out there on the practice field next week and playing in the game."

Beyond Kalil's productivity, the Panthers must proceed without one of the locker room's outspoken leaders.

"He is most certainly one of the emotional leaders, and it's hard to replace those kind of guys," Rivera said. "The truth of the matter is it's time for us as a team to step up. This is another one of those things that's going to try us."

Center Kalil Out For Season

Written by Max Henson

Thursday, 11 October 2012 08:45

Photo Courtesy: Ryan Kalil, Carolina Panthers