

White House Usher to visit Farm

Written by

Monday, 15 October 2007 20:41

Today's the big day for Christmas tree farmer Joe Freeman.

His farm, Mistletoe Meadows in Laurel Springs is having a unique visitor: an official White House usher. The usher will select a Christmas tree to display at the White House this Christmas season. Freeman could not be more excited.

It's his first time sending a tree to the White House, and he's honored.

It all starts at 9 a.m. at the farm. We'll have comprehensive coverage on www.goblueridge.net and in our afternoon Aisling Broadcasting broadcasts.