Watauga County Board of Elections is busily preparing for November 6, director Jane Hodges says.

“We’re just getting all our books ready, trying to get all our ballots divided up,” she says.

Among races to watch is the Boone runoff- incumbent Dempsey Wilcox against newly elected Liz Aycock. Aycock won by a margin of four votes in October, after which Wilcox requested the revote. According to Hodges, the runoff is paid for by the town of Boone and will cost approximately $10,000.

One-stop voting has been going on all week and continues through November 3. Elections are November 6.
