

Legislature forms drought response committee

Written by

Tuesday, 27 November 2007 18:18

The state Legislature created a new committee to study the drought- the Joint Select Committee on the Agricultural Drought Response.

The 20-member panel will also determine what kind of response is needed- particularly where North Carolina farmers are concerned. Watauga County state senator Steve Goss is co chairing the committee on the Senate end.