Wide receiver Andy Gonzalez of the Avery High football team has been named a pre-season, all-state selection.

Gonzalez, a rising senior, has been named to the Class 1A All-State pre-season team by NCPreps.com. Gonzalez, who also plays defensive back, was an All-Western Highlands Conference selection last fall. He caught 39 passes for 746 yards and he scored seven touchdowns.

Gonzalez and quarterback Alex Villanueva, a rising junior, gave Avery a strong one-two punch last fall. The Vikings, who only won two games in 2008, came charging back to win five games last season. Villanueva completed 130 passes for 1,865 yards and he threw 18 touchdown passes. The Vikings, who return 16 lettermen, open the season at home against Robbinsville on August 20. They play Watauga in Boone on September 3. The Vikings haven't won in Boone since 2004.

In all, there were 13 players from western North Carolina that were named pre-season all-state. Linebacker/defensive lineman Ben Councill of A.C. Reynolds was named to the Class 4A squad. The Pioneers play at ACR on September 17. Linebacker Austin Rice of Mountain Heritage was named the Class 2A team.
