Appalachian State quarterback DeAndre Presley is listed as day-to-day after he suffered a head injury in the final minute of Saturday's Homecoming win against Elon.

Presley left the game under his own power and was replaced by Jamal Jackson to finish out the contest. Presley will be will evaluated on a daily basis throughout the week. And it is not yet known if Presley will even practice today.

Presley, who is listed in the top 10 nationally in passing efficiency, points responsible for and total offense, racked up 374 yards in Saturday's 34-31 win against Elon. Presley also ran for a career-high 170 yards, scored twice and threw a touchdown pass.

The Apps (5-0 overall; 3-0 in the Southern Conference) play The Citadel Saturday night at Kidd Brewer Stadium. Our coverage begins at 4 pm on AM 1450, WATA.
