

Snow ends Regular Season for Watauga Farmer's Market

Written by Steve Frank

Saturday, 29 October 2011 19:29

The final 'regular' Watauga Farmer's Market faced a snowy, rainy start to its day, with winds making the 33 degree weather even colder. Still, a good number of folks braved the weather to take in the last--which could have been the last for the Horn in the West location. But it appears that new negotiations with the parent organization, which rents the lot from the Town of Boone, weill put the market back at the 'Horn' next year. The Watauga Farmer's Market will hold its holiday market the Saturday before and the Saturday after Thanksgiving.