The Southern Conference announced its broadcast schedule for the upcoming men's and women's basketball season on Wednesday. Southern Conference men's basketball programs will make a total of 72 exposures across 14 different networks this season and will have 39 games involving league teams produced by the ESPN family of networks. ESPN3 will broadcast between 28 and 30 exclusive games involving Southern Conference men's basketball teams in 2012-13.

Nineteen of those ESPN3 games will be produced by the conference office. In addition, the conference will produce eight women's basketball games, which will air exclusively on ESPN3. The SoCon will air five men's and women's basketball doubleheaders during the season. Southern Conference men's and women's teams will have a combined minimum of 90 institutional exposures in 2012-13. In addition to appearing on the ESPN family of networks, Southern Conference men's basketball programs will make appearances on the Big Ten Network, Big 12 Network, Mid-Atlantic Sports Network, Missouri Sports Network, Pac-12 Network, Jayhawk TV, Fox Sports Ohio, Fox Sports South, the NBC Sports Network and WMYA-TV (Asheville, N.C.).

Appalachian State will be televised six times this season. The ASU men will have four games televised; the women will have two games on TV. The SoCon Tournament for the men and women will be televised on ESPN 3 March 8-10. The women's championship game will be played Monday, March 11 on ESPN3; the men's finals will be played Monday night, March 11 on ESPN or ESPN2.
