Despite tallying two pins, Appalachian State University wrestling dropped its second-straight bout to a non-conference opponent in a 24-15 loss to Duke on Wednesday night at Card Gymnasium.

Redshirt sophomore Dominic Parisi and redshirt freshman Zack Strickland each nabbed third period pins at 125 pounds and 165 pounds, respectively, but the Mountaineers could find just one other win at 197 pounds.

Appalachian got on the scoreboard in the first bout of the night, as redshirt sophomore Paul Weiss earned a hard-fought 3-1 decision over Duke's Michael Chapman. For Weiss, it was his eight dual victory of the season.

After falling at heavyweight, Parisi brought the Mountaineers back with a pin at the 6:14 mark over Peter Terrezza. The win breaks a two-bout skid for the Concord, N.C. native as he earns his first pin since his opening match at the Southern Scuffle.

The Apps were unable to keep the momentum going, dropping four-straight bouts. As the dual entered 165, the Blue Devils controlled with a 17-9 lead.

Strickland looked to provide the spark needed, remaining perfect in duals for the season with a pin over Randy Roden. The Muncy, Pa. native earned his fifth pin and third in dual matches for the year.

Facing a 17-15 deficit, the Mountaineers came up short in the remaining bouts, eventually falling 24-15. The win gives the Blue Devils just its third win over Appalachian in a series that date back to the 1930s.

The Apps return to the High Country and tournament play, as they host the Appalachian Open on Saturday, Jan. 26. Action from Varsity Gymnasium will begin at 9 a.m.
