The University of Montana University has announced the addition of two FBS transfers to its program on Tuesday. Wide receiver Jamaal Jones arrives at Montana from the University of Washington, while fullback Jamal Wilson is a transfer from Boise State. Both are redshirt sophomores who have three seasons of eligibility remaining. And both players will be eligible to play this season.

Jones, a 6-foot-1, 188-pounder from Spanaway, Wash., saw action in three games at Washington last season. Wilson, a 5-11, 238-pounder from Fontana, Calif., played in three games for Boise State last season.

Montana, from the Big Sky Conference, signed 24 players to National Letters of Intent. The Grizzlies are coming off a 5-6 season in 2012, their first losing season since 1985. The Grizzlies kick off their season at home on Aug. 31 against Appalachian State. The Mountaineers (8-4) defeated Montana 35-27 at Kidd Brewer Stadium last season.
