The Tennessee Titans have signed former Appalachian State University safety Corey Lynch. Lynch, who was among Tennessee's final roster cuts in training camp, was signed on Monday.

Lynch is a six-year veteran in the National Football League. He played in 16 games with the San Diego Chargers in 2012. He made 47 tackles, had two interceptions and eight special teams tackles.

Lynch was originally drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals in 2008 in the sixth round. He also played with the Tampa Bay Bucs in 2009-11 before he joined the Chargers last season.
