When the North Carolina State men's basketball team takes the court this season, it will be playing on a fresh new design at the Dail Basketball Center and PNC Arena.

The new design, which features the iconic wolf head at center court stretching nearly to each sideline, is completed at the team's practice facility and will be duplicated on the floor at PNC Arena this fall. The design also features a clear wood lane with the new ACC logo and different shades of wood inside and outside the 3-point arc.

The current Wolfpack players have spent much of the spring working out at Reynolds Coliseum and Carmichael Gymnasium on campus. They are ready to return to their workouts at the Dail Basketball Center. Click the video below to hear sophomores Kyle Washington and BeeJay Anya talk about the new floor design.
