

Domestic violence victims protection bill passes

Written by Lauren Ohnesorge
Monday, 18 June 2007 19:53

A bill that would make it easier for a domestic violence victim to change her name and to provide more information to applicants of protective orders about legal aid, victims' compensation and other services floated through the General Assembly.

Its next stop is Governor Mike Easley for final approval.